

Got the Power?

What do Rupert Murdoch, Donald Trump, Virgin Airlines, Coca Cola, The Bank of England and The United Nations use to give them a competitive edge?

Put away the snake oil and incense biases you might perceive when you hear the words "Feng Shui". Accepted in China as a science in 250AD, experienced senior executives globally have, albeit reluctantly (even cynically), accepted that Feng Shui simply 'works'.

Where does the power come from?

Feng Shui employs all the disciplines westerners respect. Interrelating skills we understand such environmental science, basic hygiene, aromatherapy, energy conservation, logistics, Feng Shui combines these fundamentals with geomancy, Chinese astrology and common sense, making Feng Shui a 'holistic' method of attacking all the subtle nuances that creative 'positive energy' and productivity.

How do you recruit the power?

There are three schools of Feng Shui:

Flying Star, Compass and Form. Each claims to be superior, but the companies above reportedly use consultants who are trained in all three schools. Consultants should have international training, formal qualifications and a track record of residential, as well as corporate, experience.

How do you measure the results?

When you improve the surroundings of people, in a functional and inspiring way, you improve their productivity, reduce their absenteeism, extend their working longevity, and minimise workplace stress. Says a senior Partner in a large American architectural firm, "One could think of Feng Shui as deeply rooted in myths, but this is what architects used for centuries before building laws... it was logical and powerful."

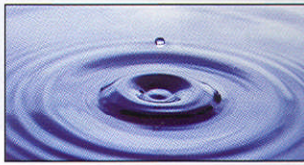

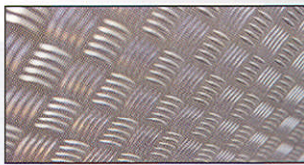

A large US medical practice claims they "doubled patient volume and quadrupled income", while a real estate mogul sums up Feng Shui for business this way. "[Feng Shui] should be considered right along with engineering, architecture, and construction."

"When you improve the surroundings of people, in a functional and inspiring way, you improve their productivity, reduce their absenteeism, extend their working longevity, and minimise workplace stress."

How to introduce Feng Shui to your company.

Major Corporations including Orange, The Body Shop, Swiss Stock Exchange and Espirit have all discovered how essential Feng Shui is in the art of successful business management. By employing a Feng Shui consultant to study the space of the workplace, by making any alterations advised, a sense of harmony and balance will be achieved that will bring the best out in staff and impress clients.

Minimising the negative effects of certain areas and improving on more productive areas avoids harmful errors, tension, resignations, and increase sales effort, morale and productive output.

INCREASE SUCCESS & PROSPERITY FOR YOUR BUSINESS

Principle, Elizabeth Wiggins, is Australia's Leading Feng Shui Consultant and is both nationally and internationally trained. Elizabeth personally manages all corporate clients, activating positive energy to improve productivity. Elizabeth works with her team of Feng Shui professionals who are qualified, knowledgeable and experienced in large commercial projects and small businesses alike. Using feng shui to increase success and prosperity in the business world is becoming increasingly popular with huge corporations considering it mandatory. Top businesses have adopted feng shui to promote inner calm, attract the vibrant energy of health, and invite an abundance of positive opportunities and increased prosperity. Feng Shui Living can help on existing as well as new locations. Just a small investment in this ancient Chinese art can promote a healthy flow of energy or "Qi". Maximise your opportunity for success - it works for Rupert Murdoch, Richard Branson, and many more! What does your company have to lose? Nothing... besides negative energy.

Feng Shui Living - AUSTRALIA WIDE
Ph: 02 9869 8289 or 0411 434 696
www.fengshuiliving.com.au
liz@fengshuiliving.com.au